CHILDREN MAKING THE EAGLE SCREAM

West Harney Street Youngsters Stage and Carry Out Details of Safe and Sane Fourth.

HAVE PARADE AND FIREWORKS

A safe and sane Fourth, also noiseless, was designed, managed and carried out by kiddies residing on West Harney street and Dewey avenue, between Thirty-third and Thirty-fifth streets. The program included a daylight parade, which the neighborhood voted outlasted anything King Ak-Sar-Ben and his minions have yet produced. A lighted lantern drill, in which fifty children participated was held at 8 o'clock last evening.

Every home along the blocks in the district is gaily hung with flags and bunting, and a lane has been formed of two rows of flags all along Harney street. Ice cream salons were provided by fond parents immediately following the children's parade, and picnic lunches on the lawn were a feature of the neighborhood.

This is the fourth year that West Harney has carried out the "safe and sane Fourth" propaganda, but this is the first time the children have undertaken the celebration. Their elders will manage the fireworks display tonight.

Eligibility requirements entail a promise to give up all noisy, harmful firecrackers and fireworks.

Ronald Gladstone was the only boy in the neighborhood who preferred the old-time Fourth of July celebration, but last reports from his sister Ethel were that the allurement of the locality celebration were beginning to tell and that the boy was weakening.

Called by the Bugle. At 5 o'clock in the morning reveille was sounded by Kenneth Norton, whose bugle notes called all the children to the George E. Mickel home, where the floats for the day light parade, which was in the nature of a peace pageant, were decorated. The parade started from this point.

No to be daunted by the fact that the Liberty bell is the center of a large Independence day celebration in Philadelphia today, and therefore could not be a feature of the West Harney parade, Eugene Lawson entered a miniature Liberty bell, a replica of the original even to the celebrated crack, in the parade, mounted on his roller coaster.

Yvonne in interest was the toy cannon float, also mounted on a roller coaster. The float was banked with cannon balls, which on distribution proved to be rubber balls for the children.

"The Ship of State," Artie Cox's toy yacht, was flanked by sailors and sailresses attired in middie costume. Mr. and Mrs. George Mickel was called upon in this connection to decide the delicate point of whether or not bathing suits were oute and had not middie blouses rather be substituted.

"The Ship of State" carried giant firecrackers filled with candy which were distributed as favors.

The aeroplane float bore a mounted airship, from which dozens of toy balloons for the children were suspended.

Three-year-old Mary Harriman perched her baby carriage and draped in the Stars and Stripes, was intended to call up the memory of Betsey Ross.

There was an Indian wigwam, inhabited by a brave and his squaw, Dorothy Norton and Kathleen Herdman; numerous cowboys, clowns, etc., but no soldiers. This was a peace parade and they were taboed.

Micelinda Peater, the peace fairy, was in fairy costume, decorated with red, white and blue. Devah Clark, Jane Lowe, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Titus Lowe; Katherine Cox, Catherine Coad and other babies, too small to march in the parade, were wheeled in their carts, which were gaily decorated for the occasion.

Rudyard Norton was an impressive Uncle Sam, Elizabeth Clark and Jeanette Wilcox were beautiful Columbias, and Virginia Herdman an attractive Goddess of Liberty.

Byron Hastings had moved out of the neighborhood, but was eager to participate, so he rode his red, white and blue festooned bicycle in the parade. Edward and Richard Westbrook, Laurence Moore, Ralph Thrane, Edward Hall the flag bearer; Edward, Edna, Elizabeth and Margaret Carmal, Jean and Lucile McGrath, Alice McCutcheon, Madeline Yard, Louise Thrane and Vivian Frances, accompanied the various floats and represented the different states in the union.

Five-year-old George E. Mickel, Jr. furnished the music for the parade. It was a small Victrola mounted on a coaster and dispensed patriotic airs throughout the march.

Gladys Mickel and Muriel Yard are in charge of the lantern drill, which will furnish the evening's entertainment, the climax to be a fine display of fireworks.

Frank J. Norton, chairman of the celebration in former years; Mrs. Norton and Mrs. George E. Mickel have listened to the children's woes all during the process of preparation for the big event and they, with Edward Getten, assisted in the appointment of the ice cream and food.

New Enterprises Seeking Locations in City of Omaha

Several substantial new enterprises are in prospect for Omaha. The new activities committee of the Commercial club is keeping in touch with them, but is not at liberty to make public the names of the concerns negotiating for locations.

A small factory for the manufacture of a farm tractor and a motor truck is anxious to locate in Omaha. This is an established company in a smaller city that desires to come to Omaha to get better truckage and railway facilities into its particular field and also desires to develop a larger field for its product.

Another factory of considerable size and good standing is negotiating for a location here. This company has been making money, it is said, in a field not so advantageously located as Omaha, and now wishes to add to its thriving business the advantage of a better location. This company manufactures certain lines of farm implements.

Two other companies are negotiating for places for a manufacturing plant in Omaha providing they can get enough local capital interested.

A jobbing concern handling men's furnishings goods is holding out an opportunity for investment, and wishes to locate in Omaha, if enough extra capital can be interested.

Myrtle Gets Lost While Her Brother Gets Into a Fight

Going to the store to buy firecrackers, with which to satisfy her grown-up desire to celebrate the Fourth, 3-year-old Myrtle Saunders, 510 North Twenty-first street, got lost near her home, when her brother, accompanying her, stopped to indulge in a fist fight.

Myrtle was picked up by passersby and turned over to the police until some one should claim her. Everybody, including the policemen, thought she was a little boy. Officer Jim Murphy tried to amuse "him" and kept "him" from crying by romping around the jail office as if he was a youngster himself.

"Have you a little lost girl at the police station?" a voice finally inquired over the phone.

"No, but we have a lost boy," Officer Tom Reilly explained.

Negotiations developed the fact that the "boy" fitted the description of the lost girl. Then the little wanderer was proved conclusively to be a girl, by the discovery of a comb in her pocket, and she combed her hair with it for the amusement of the central station.

Alfred Decker, a boy living next door to the Saunders home, called for Myrtle, and she went away happy in the prospect of finally buying her firecrackers.

BOSSIE REPORTS ON DAIRIES

New More Attention Than Formerly is Being Paid to Sediment Tests of the Milk Sold.

RECORD FOR MONTH OF JUNE

Dairy inspector Bossie, in his report for June, states that the department is giving more attention to sediment tests of milk. In one instance during the month a milkman was required to return to the dairy with his product and was directed to use cleaner methods. It is explained that careless milking usually causes sediment in milk.

During the month eighty-six dairy farm inspections were made and twelve re-inspections were included in the work of the inspector.

HUERTA SPENDS FOURTH IN JAIL

Man Who Would Not Salute Flag Enjoys Independence Day Under Arrest.

END OF REVOLUTIONARY MOVE

EL PASO, Tex., July 5.—General Victoriano Huerta, of whom Rear Admiral Mayo demanded a salute to the United States flag, spent the anniversary of American independence in the county jail here. Imprisoned with him were three former Mexican generals and two members of the personal party of the former Mexican executive.

Whether the developments of the last week mean the abandonment of a new revolutionary movement has created a division of opinion even among those characterized as Huerta's adherents. Certain of those close to Huerta are quoted as saying that his arrest has merely delayed action, but others equally close have declared that any organized move has been indefinitely postponed. Huerta himself continues to maintain silence when interrogated on any subject related to politics.

American observers are inclined to believe that with the exception of a possible movement by Orozco there will be no important action until Huerta is free from actual restraint.
